What was once a one-day affair of aggressive shoppers cleaning out department stores has now become a weeklong spectacle. The unofficial start of the holiday season arrives with the return of Black Friday, although nowadays, the deals and savings start well before the turkey has even finished cooking on Thanksgiving. Let's face it, like everyone else, you'll probably take a trip to the mall to score the latest game or a new TV at a steep discount. But don't spend a penny until you've checked out our Black Friday guide.

TWO KILLED IN SHOOTING AT CHICAGO HOSPITAL

Two people were killed and two others critically wounded in a shooting at a Chicago hospital on Monday, and among the dead was the gunman who started shooting in the parking lot and then burst into the medical facility and opened fire, according to local media. A police officer was among those wounded in the shooting on Chicago's South Side at Mercy Hospital, officials said. Police cars and ambulances swarmed the hospital after the shooting. ABC 7 Chicago and CBS Chicago, citing sources, reported that two people died in the shooting, including the gunman, and that two other people were wounded. Police searched the hospital, said Anthony Guglielmi, a Chicago Police Department spokesman. The hospital said on Twitter the shooting was over and patients were safe. Eyewitnesses told reporters the shooting began in the parking lot before moving into a clinic area inside the hospital. Police have not commented on a possible motive for the shooting. Chicago Mayor Rahm Emanuel and Police Superintendent Eddie Johnson were on their way to University of Chicago hospital, where the wounded police officer was being treated.

WHITE HOUSE RESTORES
ACCESS FOR CNN'S ACOSTA

The White House on Monday restored press access for CNN reporter Jim Acosta, ending a legal fight that had so far gone against the Trump administration. White House Press Secretary Sarah Sanders said in a statement that the press pass for Acosta, which was revoked after a contentious Nov. 7 news conference with President Donald Trump, was restored but that reporters who ignored new rules for news conferences could have their credentials taken away. Under the rules, "a journalist called upon to ask a question will ask a single question and then will yield the floor to other journalists," but a follow-up question may be permitted at the president's discretion, Sanders said. CNN, a frequent target of Trump's criticism of the news media, said in a statement its lawsuit challenging the White House's actions was no longer necessary. Earlier on Monday, the cable news network had sought an emergency federal court hearing after the White House said it would again revoke Acosta's pass once a temporary restraining order reinstating it for a two-week period expired.

BORDER CROSSING CLOSED TO BRACE FOR MIGRANTS

U.S. officials briefly closed the busiest border crossing from Mexico early on Monday to add concrete barricades and razor wire amid concerns that some of the thousands of Central American migrants at the border could try to rush the crossing. North-bound lanes at the San Ysidro crossing from Tijuana to San Diego, California, were closed "to position additional port-hardenening materials," a U.S. Customs and Border Protection spokesperson said. A Department of Homeland Security official, speaking on condition of anonymity, told reporters in a conference call later that U.S. officials had heard reports some migrants were intending to run through border crossings into California. Ahead of U.S. congressional elections earlier this month, President Donald Trump denounced the approach of a caravan of migrants as an "invasion" that threatened American national security. He sent thousands of U.S. troops to the border. By dawn on Monday, 15 of 26 vehicle lanes had reopened at the San Ysidro crossing, according to the DHS official.

FINNS RESPOND BY 'RAKING
COUNTRY GREAT AGAIN'

Puzzled Finns have taken to Twitter to post pictures of themselves raking the forest after U.S. President Donald Trump said California should learn a lesson from the Nordic country about how to protect itself against wildfires. While visiting California's wildfire zones on Saturday, Trump told reporters that Finland spends "a lot of time on raking and cleaning and doing things" to clear forest floors, citing his discussions with Finnish President Sauli Niinisto. Niinisto told Finnish newspaper Ilta-Sanomat that he had spoken with Trump about Finland's wildfire-monitoring system. He recalled telling Trump that Finland takes care of its forests, but added that raking didn't come up. Hundreds of Finns posted under the Twitter hashtag #rakefinlandgreatagain, many posting pictures of themselves in the forest or their gardens with rakes. "Anybody needs their floors raked?" tweeted NBA team Chicago Bulls' Finnish star Lauri Markkanen with a picture of him holding a rake. A #RakeAmericaGreatAgain hashtag also sprang up on the social media site.

Drug Companies Fear Release Of New $2 Sex Pill For Older Men

Men in clinical trial see huge boost in desire, strength of erections, and sexual activity without side effects.

NEW YORK - It's hard to believe that in America today an affordable pill that could improve the sex lives of millions of men is in danger of being yanked from the shelves. And it's just because big drug companies fear for their profits.

The pharmaceutical industry is desperately trying to stop exceeded expectations.

Exciting Benefits

There are very good reasons why sales are booming and drug companies want it gone. Apart from costing just two dollars per daily dose, the clinical results confirm JackedUp's active ingredient is very impressive. It greatly boosts a man's profits. Plus, if you're over 50 and suffering from low sex drive, decreased stamina and inability to perform, low testosterone is the biggest factor. If you can safely boost your testosterone, you won't need their expensive pills. That's the very reason big business is trying to have it pulled from the shelves.

Strong Clinical Results Worry Big Pharma

Recent clinical trials on JackedUp's active ingredient have made the drug companies more desperate. The trial results were published in major medical journals, and doctors are now recommending JackedUp to patients.

The testing was done on men 40 - 65 years old, and the results were remarkable. The men who took the active ingredient in JackedUp reported major improvements in their sex lives. Their ability to get and keep erections went up by over 200%. Libido and sex drive surged. Even staying power and stamina during sex more than doubled!

Head of product development, Dave McNeill, said the big drug companies weren't worried at first. "They didn't care because the active ingredient can take a few weeks before many men really feel the benefits. But these awesome clinical trials really got their attention. They're learning A LOT of men will wait a few weeks if it means avoiding negative side effects and saving money."

How It Works

The "JackedUp" pill works by helping older men produce more testosterone. It doesn't force dangerous fake testosterone into your body like injections do. Instead, it works with your body to produce testosterone naturally. And the results have been extraordinary. It's like your body reboots itself to feel like it did in the prime of your life.

Initial Users Are Thrilled...And Worried

"JackedUp has been awesome for my sex drive and performance! I'm worried it may not be available in the future. The idea that it may be taken away just to secure some big drug company's profits is very frustrating."

- Rob H., 49 years old, Colorado Springs, CO

"My wife and I were both sexually vibrant until I had prostate cancer. After my surgery we tried everything my doctor recommended but nothing worked. Within a few weeks of taking JackedUp, everything has been functioning beautifully and we've been riding high ever since!"

- Ken S., 78 years old, Phoenix, AZ

Doctors Speak Out

Drug companies are also concerned that doctors are now recommending JackedUp. The active ingredient has strong clinical results and lacks the side effects seen in current drugs on the market. This makes it an easy option for doctors to suggest.

Big Pharma Worried: Older men are having better sex after taking the newly released $2 pill called JackedUp. Clinical trials show active ingredient triggers surge in desire, strength of erections, and sexual activity in older men.

"If you're over 50 and suffering from low sex drive, decreased stamina and inability to perform, low testosterone is the biggest factor. Drug companies do NOT want men to know about this affordable new pill..."

shipments of the remarkable new "JackedUp" pill. Big Pharma is worried because men are reporting increased sex drive, stronger erections and more stamina - all without the side-effects and $40-per-pill price tag associated with drugs like Viagra. Clinical results show men feel these benefits within just a few weeks of taking JackedUp's active ingredient.

The pill, made for men over 50, was released early last month. Despite Big Pharma's efforts, sales have already ability to get and keep erections. Stamina during sex also improves.

The product also has a unique ability to help men feel more passion, desire, and sex drive. These impressive benefits come from boosting testosterone levels by up to a whopping 193%. Doctors are astounded by its effects.

Why do drug companies want this pill stopped? Since the "JackedUp" pill is natural, drug companies can't patent it (like they did with Viagra) and make big

Dr. Laguna-Bedia, a specialist in internal medicine says, "A lot of men think their lack of interest and inability to perform are simply parts of aging. This is just not true. JackedUp can help these men regain a healthy appetite for sex and the physical ability to perform."

"JackedUp works by boosting key male hormones without side effects. The benefits of these hormones to sexual health are well known, but they actually do more than that. Men also report more energy, less body fat and higher motivation," said Dr. G. Pereira, a renowned surgeon in Florida.

Dr. Jacob Moss notes, "I recommend JackedUp if you're struggling with getting and keeping erections or low libido. It's also a great option for men who want to last longer and have more control over when they orgasm."

Special Opportunity for Our Readers

Drug companies are fighting hard to get rid of this product. This is making inventory disappear fast. Thankfully, a special discounted supply has been reserved for Metro Boston readers. But only for those who call within the next 48 hours.

This is the best opportunity to try JackedUp risk-free with their 100% results guarantee.

A Regional Order Hotline has been set up for local readers to call. This gives all men an equal chance to try JackedUp.

Starting at 6:00 am today the order hotline will be open for the next 48 hours. All you have to do is call TOLL FREE 1-888-932-7403 and the company will do the rest.

Due to the possibility of JackedUp being pulled from the shelf, phone lines are often busy. If you call and do not immediately get through, please be patient and call back. Current supplies of JackedUp are limited, and callers that don't get through to the order hotline within the next 48 hours will be forced to wait for more inventory to be produced. This can take as long as 6 weeks.

Boston Christmas Tree arrives from Nova Scotia on Tuesday

Nova Scotia sends a tree to Boston as an annual holiday thank-you for help during the 1917 Halifax explosion.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

The Christmas tree that adorns Boston Common every year travels all the way from Nova Scotia. This year's Tree for Boston will arrive on Tuesday.

The tree is a thank-you gift from Nova Scotia — a visual representation of gratitude from the Canadian province for the aid Boston provided after the deadly Halifax explosion on Dec. 6, 1917.

On that day, two ships collided in Halifax Harbor, killing nearly 2,000 people "almost instantly," injuring 9,000 more

Teresa Simpson and Ross McKellar, Oxford, pose in front of the tree they donated to the province for Nova Scotia's annual Tree for Boston gift. NOVA SCOTIA COMMUNICATIONS and leaving 20,000 homeless. As soon as Boston city officials learned of the tragedy via telegram, they sent a slew of first responders to Nova Scotia. Meanwhile, Bostonians raised $100,000 to help Halifax rebuild (that's more than $2 million in today's money).

But that horrible day in Halifax history has led to a heartwarming tradition, with the yearly selection and delivery of Boston's Christmas tree.

"What was devastating to the province and in particular to Halifax has been able to become something of a celebration of the aftermath of that," said Nova Scotia Deputy Premier Karen Casey. "We're not forgetting the devastation and destruction and deaths, but we're also [saying that] out of that destruction and desperation came something very positive."

The bond between Nova Scotia and Boston is now something truly special, and that means it's a big honor to play a part in the Boston Christmas Tree tradition. Officials are always looking out for a satisfactory tree to send this way, said Tim Whynot of the Nova Scotia Department of Natural Resources, and sometimes people even submit their backyard trees for consideration.

"We are very proud and excited that our tree will represent Nova Scotia's gratitude toward the people of Boston."

Ross McKellar

This year's Boston Christmas Tree is a 46-foot-tall white spruce from Oxford, Nova Scotia. A government staffer noticed the tree and officials reached out to the owners, Ross McKellar and Teresa Simpson, about donating it this holiday season.

"We are very proud and excited that our tree will represent Nova Scotia's gratitude toward the people of Boston," said Ross McKellar in a statement. "It is an honor for us to be part of this tradition of remembering our past and thanking Boston for their kindness, friendship and help during one of our province's darkest moments."

The Boston Police Department will escort the official Boston Christmas Tree around 10 a.m. Tuesday, beginning in Billerica and continuing to Boston Common. Boston Parks Commissioner Chris Cook, an official Nova Scotian town crier, Santa Claus and local schoolchildren will greet the tree at its final destination, near the Boston Common Visitor Center at 139 Tremont St.

The Boston Christmas Tree Lighting celebration is Thursday, Nov. 29 from 6 to 8 p.m. Casey will be down from Nova Scotia for the event, which will commemorate the 101st anniversary of the explosion.

"I know Boston comes alive at that time and I'm really excited," she said. "We want to personally say thanks to the folks in Boston, and I know people in Boston want to personally show their appreciation and their gratitude for the tree."

Rain may hamper search for California wildfire victims

Emergency services stepped up their efforts on Monday to find remains of victims of California's deadliest-ever wildfire as nearly 1,000 people remained unaccounted for, but rain expected this week could make that search harder and raise the risk of dangerous mudslides.

The remains of 77 people have been recovered, the Butte County Sheriff's Office said late on Sunday, as it cut the number of missing to 993 from 1,276.

The number of missing has fluctuated dramatically over the last week as reports have come in from rescue teams in the field. The sheriff's office said that the number will continue to move up and down as remains are found, more missing reports come in and people who have been reported missing turn up safe.

Some people appear to have been added to the list more than once under variant spellings of their names, the Los Angeles Times reported.

The Camp Fire broke out in northern California on Nov. 8 and quickly all but obliterated Paradise, a mountain town of nearly 27,000 people around 90 miles north of the state's capital, Sacramento.

It has burned about 151,000 acres and was 66 percent contained early on Monday, up from 65 percent late on Sunday, the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection (Cal Fire) said.

Up to four inches of rain is expected to fall north of San Francisco between late Tuesday and Friday, said Patrick Burke, a forecaster at the National Weather Service's Weather Prediction Center in Maryland.

Heavy rain could aid with containing the fire this week, but may also make it harder for teams sifting through ash and dirt looking for bodies.

Colleen Fitzpatrick, founder of the California-based consulting company Identifinders International, said the expected rain will turn the site into a "muddy, mushy mess," slick with wet ash.

"It's going to coat things and stick to things and it's going to make it a lot harder to find remains," she said. "There's really nothing that can be done about this. The workers looking for remains are going to be stuck with this."

Pathologists from the University of Nevada, Reno, worked through the weekend as firefighters peeled back debris, collecting bits of burned bones

"It's going to coat things and stick to things and it's going to make it a lot harder to find remains."

Colleen Fitzpatrick, founder of Identifinders International and photographing everything that might help identify the victims.

The rain also could increase the risk of mudslides.

Heath Hockenberry, the National Weather Service's fire program leader, said that in "high-intensity" fires, trees release gas that can form pockets and create a "very volatile, waxy layer under the soil."

Meanwhile, the vegetation above ground has been burnt and the root system weakened. Overall, this creates a top layer of soil that is "hydrophobic," or extremely resistant to water, Hockenberry said.

"Throw a lot of water on that soil, then gravity just takes over," he said.

In a mudslide, the top layer of soil gives way, carrying boulders with it downhill at up to 35 miles per hour, he said.

The storm, which is expected to carry moderate winds of about 15 to 20 mph, could also cause problems for evacuees, hundreds of whom are sheltering in tents and cars.

The number of people in need of shelter is not clear, but as many as 52,000 people had been ordered to evacuate.

Four hundred miles south of Sacramento near Malibu, at least two inches of rain are expected to fall on a second fire, the Woolsey. Known to have killed three people, it was 94 percent contained on Monday morning and full containment was expected by Thanksgiving on Thursday.

Malibu's power supply was cut off on Monday to allow for repairs, the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department said. REUTERS

Nick Vallelonga brings father's story to

"Green Book" is now in theaters.
UNIVERSAL PICTURES

"People are getting emotional when they see it, because it is not false."

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

"Green Book" is an extraordinary true story of Italian-American bouncer Tony Lip driving African-American pianist Dr. Don Shirley across segregated America in the early 1960s, and it almost feels too inherently cinematic to be true.

Funny and heartfelt, as well as powerful and relevant, audiences are likely to question just how much of the Viggo Mortenson and Mahershala Ali drama actually occurred.

Metro recently spoke with co-writer Nick Vallelonga about "Green Book," and he eagerly insisted that the film is almost completely true. And he would know, too, as Lip was his father, so he had the great honor of seeing his friendship with Dr. Shirley unfold.

"I lived it! I was there when it happened," says Vallelonga. "I met Don Shirley at the time of the movie. I went up to his apartment above Carnegie Hall."

"Everything is true, but we moved things around. There was obviously some creative license because we had to connect the dots," he adds. "But the most important thing was to fill the film with social issues that are important to people, and humor. The humor comes out of the characters, so we had to be truthful to the story and the characters."

Vallelonga admits that they couldn't have made anything up, "because if we made something up, then it would be false and the film would feel manipulative."

"The story was so interesting and diverse and funny on its own, we didn't have to do that," says Vallelonga. "So we stayed true to it. We moved things around, combined some stuff, but we stayed true to it. That's why people are getting emotional when they see it, because it is not false."

Vallelonga always knew that Tony and Don's friendship was ripe for a movie.

"I had always been into movies as a kid. I was into 'The Godfather' as a kid. But even as a teenager, I knew that this was going to be my movie. The story was unbelievable," says Vallelonga. "I started tape-recording my father telling it to me. Then in my 20s, I got more serious about it. He was like, 'Right, you have to speak to Dr. Shirley and get his side of the story and his permission.' I did all that."

However, Vallelonga had to bide his time before starting work on "Green Book."

"It is a beautiful tribute to my father, Dr. Shirley and my family."

"Dr. Shirley didn't want this movie made until after he was gone. He had his reasons. So I had to respect that. Both he and my father passed in 2013 and so I went out to make it," says Vallelonga. "I actually spoke to James Gandolfini about it. But then he passed away, too. Then 2015 was when I spoke to Brian Currie. Brought him in to write with me, who brought it to Pete Farrelly."

Vallelonga ended up giving it to Farrelly to helm as he believed the director was the "right guy to get this story out there."

"I knew what it could be. It was hard for me to give up, because I wanted to direct it myself. I even directed some short films myself to get ready for it," says Vallelonga. "I was waiting, waiting, waiting. But then it hit me that this story was more important than me. So I put my ego aside and did everything I could to get the story out there.

"And I am so happy I did," he adds. "It is a beautiful tribute to my father, Dr. Shirley and my family."

Netflix hopes to conquer all things food with 'The Final Table'

The streaming service has been chipping away at Food Network's dominance for years.

ANDREW HUSBAND
letters@metro.us

When it comes to reality competition shows having something to do with food, the Food Network still reigns supreme with "Chopped," "Iron Chef America" and other similar programs. Yet Netflix has been steadily making claims with documentary series like "Chef's Table" and "Ugly Delicious," and, more recently, competition shows like "Nailed It." On Tuesday, the streaming giant will plant an even bigger flag with "The Final Table."

Hosted by former Bon Appetit restaurant editor Andrew Knowlton and produced by "MasterChef" alums Robin Ashbrook and Yasmin Shackleton, "The Final Table" is a global culinary competition that features many of the world's top chefs. Twelve teams of two will square off with one another by cooking a variety of dishes from Mexico, Spain, England, Brazil, France, Japan and the United States.

As for the contest's titular goal, the last chef standing will earn the 10th spot at "The Final Table," alongside world-famous chefs Enrique Olvera of Mexico, Andoni Aduriz of Spain, Clare Smyth of the United Kingdom, Helena Rizzo of Brazil, Vineet Bhatia of India, Grant Achatz of the United States, Carlo Cracco of Italy, Yoshihiro Narisawa of Japan and Anne-Sophie Pic of France. Presumably, should "The Final Table" return with more episodes, future prizes will include expansion of said table's size.

If the overdramatic title weren't enough, simply watching the trailer Netflix released last month should convince you just how over-the-top this series is. Dramatic music, quick cuts between chefs cooking and judges eating, celebrity cameos by the likes of Hasan Minhaj and Dax Shepard — it's all there. Everything fans of reality cooking competitions have come to expect from shows like "Iron Chef" and "Guy's Grocery Games" will recognize it here and, as a result, want to eat it all up.

Because the thing is, as predictable as these programs are, we love them. Even though they have become as formulaic as the police procedural championed by the "Law & Order" and "CSI" franchises, the target audience already knows what to expect. And even though they already know what's coming, they will watch everything new that comes their way.

Food Network knows this. That's why they've been putting out show after show for the past few decades, and why so many of them have stuck around long enough to foster growing foodie fandoms and spin-offs into other series. Netflix is only beginning to achieve similar success with its food-centric documentary and cooking competition programs, but with "The Final Table," it looks like the streamer may finally be giving its cable-based rival a run for its tummy.

"The Final Table" is now on Netflix.

BLACK
FRIDAY5 Black Friday credit card strategies to add to your list

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

Now that you can almost smell the turkey roasting in the oven, you might be in the mood to shop: NerdWallet's 2018 Holiday Shopping Report found that the nation's consumers plan to spend an average of $776 on gifts this year, which is $116 more than they said they planned to spend last year.

They'll also be buying more of those gifts with credit cards — almost three-quarters of shoppers surveyed said they plan to buy presents with a credit card, while just 58 percent of shoppers said that last year. They estimate it will take them just over three months to pay off those purchases. Meanwhile, more than 1 in 4 people who purchased gifts with credit cards last year are still paying off those balances today.

That means they're likely paying much more for those gifts than they actually cost, given the relatively high interest rates on most credit cards. In fact, if you charge the average planned spending of $776 to a card, then make only the minimum payments, it will take 4.4 years and cost $295 in interest to pay off that debt, according to NerdWallet's calculations. That means you would pay 38 percent more for your gifts.

But for shoppers who pay off their balances each month, using credit cards can really — well, pay off.

"I love travel rewards, so I'll be using my Chase Freedom Unlimited® [to buy gifts]," says Jason Steele, a travel and credit card expert in Denver.

In addition to earning cash back and rewards, shoppers can also give their budgets a boost with some lesser-known strategies. Here are five under-the-radar ways to use credit cards smartly this holiday season:

1 Sign up for automatic refunds

Some credit card issuers have phased out "price protection" as a side perk, but that doesn't mean you can't still get a refund if the price of an item drops after you buy it.

When you sign up for an email tool like Paribus, it automatically scans your email to review your online purchases from participating retailers, then monitors the prices of those items.

2 Use a card with extended warranty protection for big purchases

If you're making a big purchase such as an appliance or video game console this holiday season, check to see whether any of the credit cards in your wallet offer extended warranty policies.

3 Choose a store card if you'll be shopping at one merchant

"Store cards, like the Target and Kohl's cards, often offer extra perks, but watch out for steep APRs," says Trae Bodge, a shopping expert and founder of the website truerae.com. "Shoppers can really benefit from using these cards, but only if they pay them off in full every month."

She says that she shops a lot at Amazon, so she uses the Amazon Prime Rewards Visa Signature card for 5 percent back on her Amazon and Whole Foods purchases.

4 Visit your card's bonus mall

While some card issuers have been sunsetting their bonus malls — online portals where you can shop and earn extra points or cash back — a handful still remain.

5 Act now for a sign-up bonus

If you're thinking of applying for a new credit card soon, consider getting it before Black Friday so you can earn any available sign-up bonuses, Bodge says. You typically have to spend a certain amount on the card within a few months of opening it, so getting the card now can help ensure you hit the required spending amount with your holiday shopping.

But as with other kinds of credit card spending, you want to make sure the lure of rewards and sign-up bonuses doesn't lead you to overspend or make you unable to pay off the balance each month.

Ready. Set. Shop.

Your ultimate guide to the best Black Friday deals.

LINDA LABAN

Don't go into holiday shopping blind. Here's the lowdown on some great deals offered by some major chains for Black Friday, both in-store and online. Individual store hours may vary, so remember to check ahead.

Best Buy

The electronics retailer is offering gamers $30 off many brands. Own "Coco," "Deadpool 2" and "Black Panther" Blu-rays and DVDs for just $6.99 each. Prices on certain Samsung Galaxy phones will be reduced by $300. Laptops will be discounted by $130-$200.

The iPad mini will be reduced by $150 and TVs large and small have $200-$300 off. Some store's Black Friday sales start from 5 p.m. on Thanksgiving night.

H&M

The Swedish high street fashion retailer will offer 30 percent off items throughout its men's, women's and children's clothing departments, both in-store and online — the latter starting at midnight on Thanksgiving. The Black Friday sale extends through Sunday, with extra markdowns on certain merchandise of up to 70 percent off the ticket price.

Old Navy

Find discounts of 40 percent or more off everything, even already-discounted items, both online and in-store. Alongside the sizable discounts at checkout, there are such irresistible stocking stuffers as silly seasonal socks for a buck a pair. Old Navy begins its Black Friday shopping extravaganza at 3 p.m. on Thanksgiving.

Target

games. T-shirts start at $3, sleepwear at $5 and sweaters at $10. Skip the pay line and pay via Target team members dotted about the store with mobile checkout devices. Also, spend $50 in-store or online or scan the wallet feature in the Target app in stores on Black Friday to receive a 20 percent off coupon, redeemable from Nov. 27 through Dec. 8. Stores are open 5 p.m. Thanksgiving night through 1 a.m. on Black Friday morning.

Walmart

Black Friday shopping begins in stores at 4 p.m. on Thanksgiving with Walmart's first-ever Light Up Black Friday free-coffee-and-cookies party for customers. Thus fueled-up, the bargain shopping ensues in earnest. Among the many discounted items are the Apple iPad 6th Generation ($80 off), Pac-Man and Galaga retro arcade machines ($50 off) and Bose SoundSport Wireless Headphones ($50 off). There's much more on offer and the "Check Out with Me" service allows payment via available associates in each department.

Jake DeBrusk has been tremendous for the B's this season.

GETTY IMAGES

DeBrusk a steadying force for B's

The young winger has been dependable for Bruins.

RICH SLATE
sports@metro.us

One forward line can only carry you so far in the NHL. One of the biggest challenges for the Bruins (11-6-3) in 2018-19 is figuring out whom they can count on up front besides the brilliant trio of left wing Brad Marchand (6 goals, 15 assists), center Patrice Bergeron (9 goals, 17 assists) and right wing David Pastrnak (17 goals, 8 assists).

In his second season with the B's, left wing Jake DeBrusk (8 goals, 2 assists) is starting to heat up as he shows that he could be just the goal-scorer and dependable player that head coach Bruce Cassidy can count on in the big games and moments.

In many ways, you could say that DeBrusk was essentially built for this since he's the son of former NHL player Louie DeBrusk, a noted tough guy in his playing days who has parlayed that into a career as a commentator on Sportsnet (Canada's equivalent of ESPN) and Hockey Night. Having a parent who plays a sport professionally has to give a kid like DeBrusk a leg up from an early age. No doubt, he was around the game all his life and his dad has been able to impart countless lessons that typical parents just wouldn't know anything about. Genetic advantages aside, the younger DeBrusk has earned his way here as he was one of Boston's three first-round picks (14th overall) in 2015, and it didn't take the Edmonton native long to reach the top level after a few professional years in the minors.

With numerous injuries to their defensive corps and Bergeron, the Bruins' lineup has been patchworked together on a nightly basis this season. This past Saturday in Arizona, DeBrusk found himself at right wing on the top line with Marchand (and Joakim Nordstrom at center), and the two combined for a DeBrusk goal that ended up being the game-winner in an eventual 2-1 nail-biting Boston victory.

"I think he took it upon himself to be a leader today," said DeBrusk about Marchand. "Obviously him and Bergy are pretty close, so anytime Bergy's missing, I think that Marchy brings it to another level."

DeBrusk also had a pair of goals on the road trip opener in Colorado last Wednesday.

At 6 feet tall and 188 pounds, DeBrusk isn't the most physically imposing guy, but he plays larger than his size, as they like to say. His goal against the Coyotes was a perfect example of that as he followed up Marchand's net drive by putting in the rebound that was left on the doorstep. DeBrusk already has four points (3 goals, 1 assist) on the power play this season, which shows that he has a nose for the net, plus his first NHL postseason experience last spring (6 goals, 2 assists) proves that he's not afraid of pressure that causes many others to wilt.

Boston's four-game odyssey ends in Detroit (9-9-2) on Wednesday (7:30 p.m., NESN) before they host Pittsburgh (7-8-3) on Black Friday (7:30 p.m., NESN) and go to Montreal (11-6-3) the following night (7 p.m., NESN).

Do you have type 2 diabetes?

Why are we doing this study?

Having high or low blood sugar levels can cause many different health problems in people with diabetes. We are doing this study to investigate two different insulins for their ability to keep the blood sugar stable and close to normal.

Why participate in a clinical study?

By participating, you will contribute to improve the treatment options for people with type 2 diabetes. You will also take an active role in your own health-care and you may learn more about the management of your diabetes. All clinical studies have a number of potential benefits but also potential risks. The study doctor will explain these to you before you decide to participate or not.

If so, you may want to consider participating in a clinical study which will compare the effect on blood sugar levels of two medicines: insulin degludec (100 U/mL) and insulin glargine (100 U/mL), in people with type 2 diabetes.

What will this study look at?

The study participants will be asked to wear a small (35mm x 5mm) blood sugar sensor on the back of the upper arm 3 times during the study.

What do I do next?

The SWITCH PRO study is currently looking for study participants. If you are interested in learning more about the study, please contact the study team:

Probate and Family Court

In the matter of: Julius Marton

Of: Nashua, NH

RESPONDENT

Alleged Incapacitated Person

To the named Respondent and all other interested persons, a petition has been filed by Massachusetts General Hospital of Boston, MA in the above captioned matter alleging that Julius Marton is in need of a Guardian and requesting that Massachusetts General Hospital of Boston, MA (or some other suitable person) be appointed as Guardian to serve on the bond.

Suffolk Probate and Family Court

24 New Chardon Street, Boston, MA 02114

The petition asks the court to determine that the Respondent is incapacitated, that the appointment of a Guardian is necessary, and that the proposed Guardian is appropriate. The petition is on file with this court and may contain a request for certain specific authority.

You have the right to object to this proceeding. If you wish to do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance at this court on or before 10:00 A.M. on the return date of 11/29/2018. This day is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline date by which you have to file the written appearance if you object to the petition. If you fail to file the written appearance by the return date, action may be taken in this matter without further notice to you. In addition to filing the written appearance, you or your attorney must file a written affidavit stating the specific facts and grounds of your objection within 30 days after the return date.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The outcome of this proceeding may limit or completely take away the above-named person's right to make decisions about personal affairs or financial affairs or both. The above-named person has the right to ask for a lawyer. Anyone may make this request on behalf of the above-named person. If the above-named person cannot afford a lawyer, one may be appointed at State expense.

WITNESS, Hon. Brian J. Dunn, First Justice of this Court.

Aries Don't let what happens around you cause you to act irrationally. Your reputation will depend on how well you respond under stress and the methods you use to get things done.

 Taurus Know what you want before you set up a meeting. Having a carefully made plan in place will impress someone in a position of authority.

Gemini Look at your options and consider your next move. You are best off acting in secret until you are sure you can trust others not to interfere. Romance is on the rise.

Cancer Put more energy behind your plans. If you want something done, be prepared to do the work yourself. Relying on someone else will lead to disappointment.

 Leo Attend networking events and socialize with people who inspire you. Befriend people who can help you advance. Your positive attitude and energetic persona will result in a leadership position.

Virgo Get out and mingle with people who can offer you pertinent information regarding something you want to pursue. A partnership will face trust issues. Exaggeration and evasion will confuse you.

 Libra Do your own thing and make personal and physical changes that will boost your happiness and confidence. Don't let anyone pressure you into doing/accepting something you don't want.

♏ Scorpio Bailing someone out of a tight spot should be handled with care. Don't let anyone take advantage of your loyalty using manipulative tactics. It's OK to say no.

 Sagittarius It's up to you to bring about change. Make plans with people who are as enthusiastic as you are to overrule anyone who isn't on the same page.

♑ Capricorn Ease into whatever you decide to do. Expect disruptions and last-minute changes that will leave you at odds regarding what to do next. Choose your allies carefully.

 Aquarius Put extra effort into your work. What you accomplish will affect your earning potential. An unexpected gift or offer will encourage you to make a positive personal change.

Pisces Don't lose sight of what's important. Take note of what others say, but don't make decisions based on what you hear. Use trusted sources to obtain accurate facts. EUGENIA LAST
